I DON'T JUST CAPTURE PICTURES, I CAPTURE FEELINGS

ABOUT ME

Born & raised in Haiti during a time where it felt like things were just starting to really fall apart. But Haiti did right by me while under her guidance. Everyone around me had a hustle, my uncle became a taxi driver, my mom started selling home goods at the market and my aunt started fixing peoples clothes. I saw at a very young age what it looked like to be naturally good at something and apply work ethics and in return get paid from it to help your family.

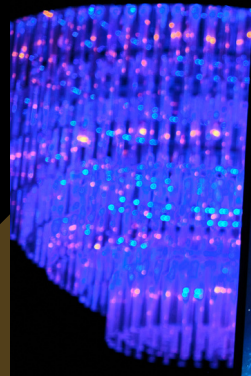

Skipping ahead to my arrival in the United States and venturing into photography post my biology degree graduation, I hold a deep passion for the art of photography. Initially, I hesitated to identify as a photographer until I believed I truly deserved the title. Even now, after many achievements, I am committed to safeguarding this passion. My current path involves leveraging all the knowledge gained from supporting others to achieve my own success in this field.
